

ARLINGTON (Va.)

NORTHERN VIRGINIA
Approved For Release 2000/05/05 : CIA-RDP75-00001R000200200053-6

SUN

Circ.: e. 16,223

Front Edit Other
Page Page Page

Date: MAR 19 1960

Two from N.Va. Honored By Civil Service League

WASHINGTON — Two Northern Virginians were among 10 career civil servants honored at the National Civil Service League's Annual Banquet Thursday night.

Edwin L. Kilby, Commissioner of the Public Debt, of 5212 Little Falls Rd., Arlington, and Lyman R. Kirkpatrick Jr., director general of the Central Intelligence Agency, 205 Orono Drive, Fairfax, received national Career Service in Awards in a ceremony at the Sheraton Park Hotel.

Alexander F. "Casey" Jones, executive editor of the Syracuse Herald-Journal and former managing editor of the Washington Post, said government must attract the bright young men and women to complement the work of these superior civil servants.

"HUNDREDS of projects demand super skills," Mr. Jones said, "and young people coming into the Government today can't be bored."

"If his sights are set on the moon or stars, he can jolly well get there soon."

Mr. Jones said that many people in Berlin, Munich and other foreign cities know more about the U. S. government than nine out of ten people in his own Syracuse.

He suggested that the Government could initiate a know-you government program similar to now being run by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce for businessmen.

FOIAb3b

CPYRGHT